Working Papers Series

This Working Paper series seeks to provide readers with access to current research dealing with peace and security issues - particularly in the Asia/Pacific region. The academic editor for the series is Betts Fetherston and the assistant editor is Wendy Lambourne.

Publication as a Working Paper does not preclude subsequent publication in scholarly journals or books; indeed it may facilitate publication by providing feedback from readers to authors.

Unless otherwise stated, publications of the Peace Research Centre are presented without endorsement as contributions to the public record and debate. Authors are responsible for their own analyses and conclusions.

PEACE
Research Centre

The Peace Research Centre was established in July 1984 by agreement between the Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade and the Australian National University. Its brief is to: carry out high quality research on topics relating to the conditions for establishing and maintaining peace on national, regional and global scales; and provide training in research in this field.

An Advisory Committee is responsible for general oversight of the Centre, which is funded by the Australian Government. In addition to conducting research and teaching, the Centre publishes working papers, monographs and a Peacedoc series, and a quarterly periodical, Pacific Research.

Details of Centre activities and publications may be obtained from:

Preface

The island of Timor lies some 600 kilometres off the northwest coast of Australia. The western half of the island was under Dutch colonial rule until it became part of the newly independent Republic of Indonesia in 1945. The eastern half of Timor was part of the Portuguese empire for 400 years, and one of the last remaining colonies in the world until the Indonesian invasion in 1975 and subsequent annexation of the territory as its 27th province in May 1976. It is estimated that between 100,000 and 200,000 East Timorese (up to one-third of the population) died as a result of the invasion and ensuing famine and disease.

The East Timorese people's struggle for self-determination has not ceased since the invasion and occupation by Indonesia, and consultations are continuing between Indonesia and Portugal under United Nations auspices in an effort to identify possible avenues towards achieving a "just, comprehensive and internationally acceptable solution".

This bibliography is an unannotated listing of publications and some unpublished works on East Timor from the period 1970 to 1993. It includes items in English, Dutch, Portuguese, Indonesian, and French, and covers political, sociological, anthropological, historical, economic, legal and scientific aspects. No area or language has been deliberately excluded. However, a conscious decision was made not to include newspaper or newsletter articles except for some pieces judged to be of special political significance or because they report first-hand observations in East Timor.

While comprehensive, the bibliography does not claim to be exhaustive nor perfectly complete and accurate in its citations. Rather, it is intended as a working document - a preliminary checklist of items to be used as a research tool. We hope it will have an organic existence and be amended and grow, with time and the contributions of others.

Bibliographical Notes

Sue Rabbitt Roff is a social scientist who taught at Melbourne and Monash Universities in the early 1970s. She was associated with the New York office of the Petitioning Delegation of the Democratic Republic of East Timor in 1975 and 1976 and was Non-Governmental Representative of the Minority Rights Group to the United Nations in New York from 1980 to 1990. Her publications on East Timor include Timor's Anschluss: Indonesian and Australian Policies in East Timor 1974-76 (Edwin Mellen Press, 1992). She currently teaches in the Centre for Medical Education of Dundee University in Scotland.

Peter Carey is a Fellow and Tutor in Modern History at Trinity College, Oxford, specialising in the history of Southeast Asia, particularly Indonesia and Cambodia. Since 1983, when he was asked to write a review of James Dunn's East Timor: A People Betrayed for the Times Literary Supplement, he has been following events in East Timor closely. He has co-edited (with G. Carter-Bentley) a volume of papers on East Timor entitled East Timor at the Crossroads: The Forging of a Nation, 1974-1994 (to be published by Cassell in 1995), based on East Timor conferences held in Oxford (December 1990) and Washington (April 1991). He is also currently working with the British photographer Steve Cox on an illustrated volume entitled East Timor: Generations of Resistance, which will look at East Timorese society at the time of the November 1991 Santa Cruz massacre.

Wendy Lambourne is a Research Assistant at the Peace Research Centre and a postgraduate student in international law at the Australian National University. In March 1992 she completed a Masters research paper entitled 'Australian Foreign Policy Towards Indonesia and East Timor: Realpolitik, Ethics and the National Interest' covering the period from July 1974 when the first steps were begun in the East Timorese decolonisation process up to and including responses to the Santa Cruz massacre in November 1991.

Acknowledgements

The publication of this bibliography would not have been possible without the assistance of researchers and writers with expertise on East Timor who offered additions and corrections to the original list compiled by Sue Roff. In addition to the substantial contributions made by Peter Carey and Wendy Lambourne, others to whom acknowledgement is due include Kevin Sherlock, Pat Walsh, Roger Clark, John Taylor, Charles Scheiner, Carmel Budiardjo, Herb Feith, and Liz Gardiner.

The following bibliographies were also consulted for items to include in this bibliography: Ian Rowland (compiler), Timor: Including the islands of Roti and Ndao, World Bibliographical Series Vol. 142, Oxford: Clio Press, 1992; Andrew McClean (compiler), Security, Arms Control, and Conflict Reduction in East Asia and the Pacific: A Bibliography, 1980-1991, Bibliographies and Indexes in Law and Political Science No. 19, Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1993.
